OF SELECT STRAWBERRY PLANTS

J. W. JONES & SON,
FRANKLIN, VA.

Dear Friend:

For the third consecutive year we are issuing only the simplest kind of Price List for our plants. The past season was one of difficulty in growing plants, in that the latter half of it was very dry. Plants are large and well developed, but the crop is less than one half of what we should have. Prices are therefore advanced over those of a year ago, but are still lower than most. We think that taking the United States as a whole that there will be available not more than 30% of a normal supply of plants for this Spring's planting. That means getting in your order early, if no disappointment is to be suffered.

For the duration we are devoting most of our land to the crops called for in the defense program. We are offering only a few varieties in the leading kinds. After the war, we expect to have a complete list and to issue our regular illustrated catalogue. This year we can fill your order with well developed, true-to-name, well packed and fresh dug plants. They will reach you on time and in good condition. Remit by check or bank draft and give plain shipping directions. Express is the best and cheapest way to ship, except in small quantities.

LIST OF VARIETIES

DORSETT: Very popular in many localities and does very well indeed for us here. The plants grow vigorously, but do not often get too thick. The berries are a full red, with green cap, fine size and uniform shape. In productivity it will not quite equal Premier or Catskill, but it bears well and always sells for a good price. Just about the same ripening season as Premier.

FAIRFAX: Never makes too many plants, but is a vigorous grower and quite productive of berries of the largest size and the most superb flavor. None is quite its equal to eat out of hand. It is apt to turn dark quite soon after picking, but this does not mean that it is spoiled. Its ripening season is same as Premier also. Unquestionably the best for home garden, and near market.

BLAKEMORE: Unequalled as a market berry where it does well. Grows too thick in most places, but when kept thin will bear a nice crop. We do not recommend it for northern areas.

PREMIER: Still without a peer to grow, to stand frost, to produce, and to sell in all markets. We do not need to say more. It is the safest on the list for the individual who wishes early berries. Our stock is very clean and healthy. No one has better at any price.

CATSKILL: If you wish anything later than Premier, plant Catskill. It will bear as many berries, they are fine size, color, and good shape. A vigorous grower, we unhesitatingly recommend it as by far the best later season variety.
